Abstract

A method of mapping a color produced by an image device in a presentation color space to a destination color space including steps of receiving the color from the image device, determining if color is to be preserved, converting the color to the destination color space using a default profile if it is determined that color is to be preserved, and converting the color to the destination color space using a device-specific profile absent a determination that color is to be preserved.